

Ross and Natasha (in the style of Jack and Diane by John Cougar Mellencamp)

Little ditty 'bout Ross and Natasha
Met at Resto-Depot, where the sparks, they flew
Sat across the table, world melting away
In a crowded room, just them in the fray

Ross, he's older, but his heart's on fire
Natasha's got the spirit, lifts him higher
With her son, young Christopher, they share a love so true
In sports, dancing, cars, they found something new

Oh yeah, life goes on
Long after the thrill of that first date is gone
Oh yeah, life goes on
Long after the sparks, they've settled and shone

Natasha loves life, with a youthful flair
Ross sees the world anew with her there
They dance through the nights, laugh through the days
Their union is a gift, in so many ways

God's blessing on this love, it's clear to see
Together for eternity, they'll always be
In each other's arms, they find their home
With Christopher, they'll never be alone

Oh yeah, life goes on
Long after the thrill of that first date is gone
Oh yeah, life goes on
Long after the sparks, they've settled and shone

Let it rock, let it roll
Natasha's joy has brightened Ross's soul
Hold on to sixteen as long as you can Change comin' 'round real soon, making life grand

Little ditty 'bout Ross and Natasha
Two American kids doing the best they can
Living, loving, in God's grand plan
Together forever, hand in hand
